

Dementia provision analysis informs planning needs assessment

Carterwood was instructed to provide a highly detailed analysis of dementia provision and prevalence across a large catchment within Greater London.

Background:

- Client seeking to develop innovative specialist care scheme offering range of extra care, close care and registered care provision.
- The nature of the proposed scheme required a new approach to analysing specialist dementia provision.
- Client specifically asking for opinion and insight in addition to robust statistical analysis.

What we did:

- Analysed prevalence rates for categories of care within proposed specialist unit.
- Provided an analysis of existing supply and demand using bespoke approach to provision classification.
- Reviewed all relevant planned provision over previous 3 years.
- Reviewed existing provision of care villages and private extra care/ assisted living schemes.
- Analysis based upon the population profiles of over 65, 75 and 85-year-olds and estimated levels of need based upon likely target markets.
- Analysed structure of current dementia provision across over 200 registered facilities.

Added value:

- Developed new approach to analysing specialist dementia provision.
- Identified subsets of prevalence for specific needs.
- Presented opinion in format suitable for consideration by planning authorities.
- Bespoke report structure to match client requirements exactly.
- Achieved completion within tight deadlines to complete client satisfaction.
